

The participant that I selected for the impression test preferred to give feedback without the recording so here is the transcript:

When first looking at it, I don't like that the filter button font is different from the other font, I think it is kinda unnecessary and looks out of place and it doesn't look very continuous. Also the username does not look like part of the post I think it should be some what grouped in a way but I also think it looks cleaner to have the lack of borders, you definitely know more than I do about this but maybe something to consider. I like the grid button and how it doesn't have like a normal button look, I think it makes it look more cleaner. I like the large bold header of the username especially if the audience is an adult or an elder. I also like how the focus of the page is on the image content itself and isn't cluttered by other content or media. I also like the tab bar because it is sleek and highlights the capturing of content and encourages the user to add more pictures. Also I like how the page that you are on is highlighted in a filling out way. I'm not sure if there needs to be that many tabs in the tab bar but I also think that it would look a little unbalanced if there is only one page on one side and two pages on the other.